

You are not logged in Log In or Sign Up

Splash Page
About this Blog

You've turned the page to the place where panels and popcorn meet. From coverage of comic-inspired flicks to that buzzed-about graphic novel that's being primed for the big-screen, you'll find it all here at MTV's Splash Page. Check throughout the day for breaking news, exclusive chats with Hollywood stars and comic legends, and first looks at the blockbusters of tomorrow.

tips@mtvmoviesblog.com

Subscribe to the MTV Splash Page RSS feed!

Sarah Palin, Michelle Obama And Hillary Clinton Finally Get Together... For A Comic Book

Published by Brian Warmoth on Thursday, June 25, 2009 at 11:40 am.

Don't let the cover of Bluewater Productions' new "Female Force: Volume 1" fool you. Sarah Palin and Hillary Clinton have not formed a ladies' version of the Justice League — which is too bad, because there's a great crossover to be had with Robert Smigel's X-Presidents.

While Palin is indeed brawling in at least one comic — Devil's Due Publishing's "Barack the Barbarian" — Bluewater instead opted for a non-fiction series about prominent figures such as Oprah Winfrey and Condoleezza Rice, several of whom appear in the new "Female Force" collection.

"We have seen there is a considerable market for this type of comic," announced Bluewater president Darren Davis. "We believe this issue of collected life stories will be the first of many volumes."

The first four issues of the series assembled in the new volume detail the lives of Palin, Obama, Clinton, and Caroline Kennedy. The book also contains a forward by Debbie Walsh, the director of the Center for American Women and Politics.

Bluewater seems extremely ambitious with their new quest to exploit a non-fiction niche in monthly pamphlet comics that few companies have touched in recent decades. IDW's Barack Obama and John McCain comics got a lot of publishers thinking last fall, though, and now we have books like "Female Force" on the racks to show for it.

I'm still holding out for a "Female Force"/X-Presidents team-up, though.

What do you think of Bluewater Productions' "Female Force" series? What female figures do you think they should look at down the line? Share your thoughts in the comment section below!